

Sue Gatenby

Nutrition
Director for Europe,
PepsiCo

Sue joined PepsiCo in 2005 where she and her team are responsible for nutrition strategy, policy, communication and innovation for brands such as Quaker, Tropicana, Gatorade, Walkers/Lays and PepsiCola across Europe. She also leads a programme of internal nutrition education and research to support the diverse portfolio.

Sue works closely with the Global Corporate Sustainability team to ensure the delivery of the Global PepsiCo Performance with Purpose agenda, focused on nutrition, diet and health. As part of a global team, she won the Chairman's Award in 2009 for her work on developing nutrition standards. In the UK Sue has been a key member of the team responsible for PepsiCo's Health Report and works internally to drive the delivery on its commitments.

Sue has over 25 years experience in nutrition research and education and in the food industry. She has published over 50 scientific papers and reports. Following qualification as a dietitian and the completion of a PhD in Clinical Nutrition at King's College London, she joined the University of Surrey as Lecturer in Nutrition and Dietetics. She returned to full time nutrition research at the Institute of Food Research in 1991 during which time she worked, as a consultant to the UK Department of Health on the development of the UK's Food Guide: The EatWell Plate.

Sue joined PepsiCo following senior nutrition roles with GlaxoSmithKline and the IGD (industry think-tank) where she convened the Industry Nutrition Strategy Group in 2003 and established the multi-sector group which developed GDAs.

Sue lives in Berkshire, is a Governor on the Council of the British Nutrition Foundation, is a Governor at her local primary school responsible for school nutrition standards, and has two children who happily absorb all of her spare time.
